Unit 1 - UK Politics Key Terms

|--------------------------|--|
| Legitimacy | The rightful use of power in accordance with pre-set criteria or widely-held agreements, such as a government's right to rule following an election or a monarch's succession based on the agreed rules. |
| Direct democracy | All individuals express their opinions themselves and not through representatives acting on their behalf. This type of democracy emerged in Athens in classical times and direct democracy can be seen today in referendums. |
| Representative democracy | A more modern form of democracy through which an individual selects a person (and/or political party) to act on their behalf to exercise political choice. |
| Pluralist democracy | A type of democracy in which a government makes decisions as a result of the interplay of various ideas and contrasting arguments from competing groups and organisations. |
| Democratic deficit | A flaw in the democratic process where decisions are taken by people who lack legitimacy, not having been appointed with sufficient democratic input or subject to accountability. |
| Participation crisis | A lack of engagement by a significant number of citizens to relate to the political process either by choosing not to vote or to join or become members of political parties or to offer themselves for public office. |
| Franchise/suffrage | Franchise and suffrage both refer to the ability/right to vote in public elections. Suffragettes were women campaigning for the right to vote on the same terms as men. |
| Think tanks | A body of experts brought together to collectively focus on a certain topic(s) – to investigate and offer solutions to often complicated and seemingly intractable economic, social or political issues. |
| Lobbyists | A lobbyist is paid by clients to try to influence the government and/or MPs and members of the House of Lords to act in their clients' interests, particularly when legislation is under consideration. |

Unit 2 – UK Government Key Terms

|---------------------------|---|
| Constitution | A set of rules determining where sovereignty lies in a political system, and establishing the relationship between the government and the governed. |
| Unentrenched (entrenched) | A constitution with no special procedure for amendment. |
| Uncodified (codified) | A constitution not contained in a single written document. |
| Unitary (federal) | A political system where all legal sovereignty is contained in a single place. |
| Parliamentary sovereignty | The principle that Parliament can make, amend or unmake any law, and cannot bind its successors or be bound by its predecessors. |
| The rule of law | The principle that all people and bodies, including government, must follow the law and can be held to account if they do not. |
| Statute law | Laws passed by Parliament. |
| Common law | Laws made by judges where the law does not cover the issue or is unclear. |
| Conventions | Traditions not contained in law but influential in the operation of a political system. |
| Authoritative works | Works written by experts describing how a political system is run, they are not legally binding but are taken as significant guides. |
| Treaties | Formal agreements with other countries, usually ratified by Parliament |
| Devolution | The dispersal of power, but not sovereignty, within a political system. |

| Most votes are based on self interest rather than the good of the whole population. | It can encourage more segregation because people will congregate amongst like minded people when discussing politics. This creates fragments in society | There are more instances when people can influence and manipulate others because there are a greater number of votes. This means there could be a lot of corruption taking place. | Government officials can be immediately recalled in a direct democracy. People can quickly initiate a recall rather than wait for the end of the term. This keeps politicians honest because the power is with the people. | |

Unit 2 September Content: The Constitution

1. Watch the video below link attached <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZwLgjUPQCMY>
2. Complete the Key word task below:

Below is a list of key-terms that are going to come up when studying the UK constitution. You must then match the key-term to the definition and then link to the extra information. (Hint: the key-term will be included somewhere in the definition and/or extra information.)

| Key-term | Definition | Extra information |
|---------------------------|---|---|
| Codified Constitution | Members of the aristocracy who owe their title to their birth, i.e. they inherit their titles from their fathers. | The most recent national UK referendum saw the British people vote to leave the EU. |
| Constitutional Convention | Devolution refers to the division of powers among regions of the country. | Although theoretically devolved power could be taken from Scotland, NI and Wales, it is so unlikely to happen that the UK is often referred to as a quasi-federal state |
| Entrenchment | A constitution that is contained in a single document that was created at a specific time. | The 1999 House of Lords act limited the number of hereditary peers to 92. |

|-----------------------------------|---|---|
| Parliamentary Sovereignty | The principle established after 1689, which means that the UK parliament in Westminster is supreme within the political system. | In the UK, there was devolution of powers from Westminster to parliaments and assemblies in Northern Ireland, Wales and Scotland. |
| Referendum | The constitutional arrangement whereby the three branches of government – legislature, executive and judiciary – have separate powers and can control each other's power. | The US have a codified constitution, written in a single, 10,000-word document that outlines the dispersion of power and rights of individuals. |
| Federalism | An unwritten rule that is considered binding, even though it is not part of the law. | Parliamentary sovereignty means that any new government can amend the constitution just by passing a new parliamentary statute. |
| Hereditary Peers | A constitutional principle that divides sovereignty, or ultimate power, between central government and regional governments. | The establishment of the Supreme Court in 2005/9 removed the highest appellate court from the House of Lords, increasing the separation of powers in the UK. |
| Electoral System | The constitutional principle that the judges should be independent from pressure by politicians. | In the UK, the Salisbury Convention prevents the House of Lords from opposing the second or third reading of any government legislation promised in its election manifesto. |
| Devolution | A constitutional principle whereby constitutional rules are safeguarded against change by a future government. | Entrenchment is the device that protects a constitution from short-term gain. Ireland and France require referendums. |
| The Independence of the Judiciary | The mechanism by which votes at elections are converted into seats awarded to candidates and parties. | The electoral system used in UK general elections is First Past the Post. More proportional systems are used in devolved governments in Northern Ireland, Wales and Scotland. |
| Separation of Powers | A system of devolution where it is so difficult for power to be returned to central government that it is effectively a federal system. | The independence of the judiciary was assured with the introduction of a Supreme Court following the Constitutional Reform Act, 2005. |
| 1 square limes fad ----- | A vote held among the electorate at national, regional or local level to resolve an important issue. | The USA is a good example of federalism, with the states retaining certain powers that can only be removed through a change in the constitution. |

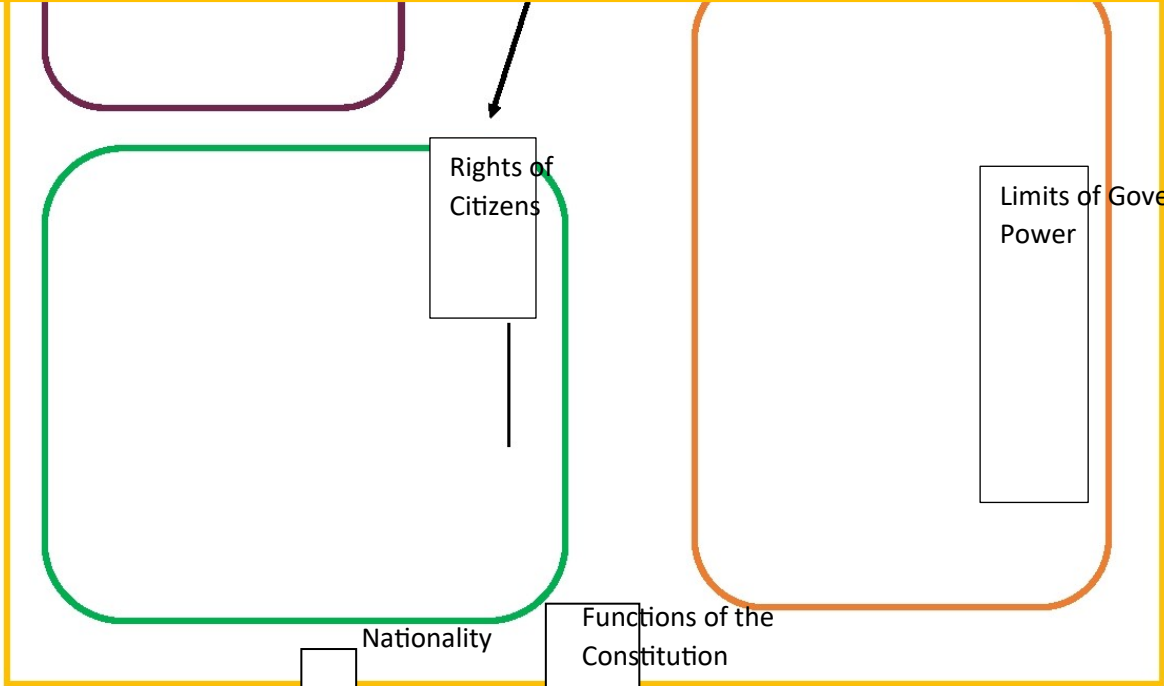

Task 3: Read the information sheet below and complete the table about the functions of the constitution.

The functions of constitutions

There are different forms of constitutions. Some constitutions, such as the USA, Ireland and France, are codified. This means they are written in a specific document. The UK in comparison, has an uncodified constitution. It developed gradually as a result of certain landmark events™. Despite certain differences, all constitutions perform the same functions. Read through the functions below and answer the questions.

Constitutions determine how political power should be distributed within the state. In federal states, such as the US, it determines what power lies with central government in Washington and what powers lie with the individual states. In unitary states, such as the UK, it outlines the sovereignty that lies with parliament. The constitution also determines where the balance of power lies between government and parliament, president and prime minister and between two chambers of systems that are bicameral (e.g. House of Lords and House of Commons).

Constitutions also establish the political processes that make the system work, such as the relationships between institutions and the rules that govern how they operate. For example, the UK constitution outlines the powers of the House of Lords and limits the challenges it can make to the House of Commons through conventions such as
